

CPHR Canada recognizes fifteen members as Fellows

Esteemed accolade bestowed for significant contributions to the HR profession

Vancouver, B.C. — CPHR Canada proudly announces that it has recognized 15 members across Canada with the prestigious designation of Fellows of the Chartered Professionals in Human Resources (FCPHR). This follows a comprehensive, rigorous, and intensive application process judged by an esteemed National Fellowship Committee comprising CPHR Canada Fellowship members (FCPHR's).

The FCPHR designation is a prestigious national distinction that recognizes leadership, outstanding achievement, and exceptional as well as exemplary contributions by CPHRs to the profession.

Eligible nominees for the Fellow CPHR should have demonstrated leadership in at least three of five key areas.

A nominee will also have exemplified the values in the CPHR code of conduct (fairness, justice, dignity, respect, and integrity) and have shown adherence to the statutory acts, regulations, and bylaws of CPHR Canada, and their provincial HR association.

“The FCPHR designation represents the significant contributions of our CPHR members who work tirelessly to help elevate the awareness and understanding of the impact HR has on an organization’s business goals and growth,” said CEO, Anthony Ariganello (Tony), CM, FCPHR, FCPA, FCGA, ICD.D. “Their dedication to advancing the HR profession and championing best practices serves as an inspiration to their peers and future generations of HR leaders.”

This year’s list of FCPHRs can be found here.
